Directions and Conditions

Beneficiary Designation: This beneficiary designation is subject to the provisions of SDCL chapter 3-12C and rules adopted pursuant to that chapter.

A. General

1. You may designate any person or entity as a beneficiary, except you may not name a person or entity as a beneficiary as a means of providing security for a debt or loan.
 - (a) Primary Beneficiary:
A primary beneficiary is the person or persons or entity (ies) that you wish to receive any available payment in the event of your death. If you name two or more primary beneficiaries, they will share equally unless a specific share is designated. If one of them named does not survive you, that person's share will be distributed equally among the surviving named primary beneficiaries.
 - (b) Contingent Beneficiary:
A contingent beneficiary is the person or persons or entity (ies) that you wish to receive any available payment in the event that there are no surviving primary beneficiaries. If you name two or more contingent beneficiaries, they will share equally unless a specific share is designated. If a contingent beneficiary does not survive you, that person's share will be distributed equally among the surviving named contingent beneficiaries.
In the event you may wish to designate your children as contingent beneficiaries and to ensure that a child is not missed in the designation, consider writing either of the following statements in place of the names of the children: (A) Any and all surviving children; or (B) All children.
 - (c) Surviving Spouse:
If no beneficiary survives you, any payment will be made to your surviving spouse.
 - (d) Children:
If no beneficiary or spouse survives you, any payment will be made to your children.
 - (e) Estate:
If no beneficiary, spouse, or children survive you, any payment will be made to your estate.
2. Your beneficiary designation is effective when properly executed and accepted by SDRS. In the event two or more SDRS beneficiary forms are prepared and on file, the form with the most recent date will be followed.
3. In order to receive payment, a beneficiary or estate must file an application for payment.
4. For your protection you should submit a new beneficiary designation form whenever there is a change in your family status (marriage, divorce, birth, death, adoption, etc.) or change in your designation.
5. Divorce: It is important to note that state law will not recognize an ex-spouse as a named beneficiary unless that person is named on an SDRS Form E-5, "Beneficiary Designation Form," that is prepared, signed, and dated after the date of divorce.

B. Payment to a Minor

SDRS cannot make beneficiary payments directly to minors. If any person designated as your beneficiary is a minor, payment must be made to a conservator or to a custodian. You can save time and expense by designating a custodian as beneficiary and completing SDRS Form E-5A, "Transfer to Minor Form." This form can be obtained on the SDRS website, www.sdrs.sd.gov, or by contacting the SDRS office.
